State [Party]: GERMANY reporting for time period from 01.01.2010 to 31.12.2010

In cases where contamination with unexploded ordnance causes social and economic problems for society, the German Federal Government, as a measure of humanitarian aid, cooperates with trustworthy experienced organisations on the ground in clearing mines, cluster munitions, and other explosive remnants of war. The major objective, besides reducing poverty and promoting development, is to ensure the population's physical safety and alleviate human suffering. The assistance is also intended to help the respective countries to fulfil their obligations under the Anti-Personnel Mines, Cluster Munitions and UN Certain Conventional Weapons Conventions.

The German Federal Government has for many years allocated large amounts for humanitarian mine and ordnance clearance. Since 1992, it has provided some 200 million Euro for such projects in 42 different countries.
