Youth Multimedia Contest

Igniting Change – Youth for Humanitarian Disarmament: Advancing the goals of the Convention on Cluster Munitions

The contest is jointly supported by the Mexican Presidency and the European Union and reflects a longstanding commitment to disarmament education and to strengthening the norms of humanitarian disarmament.

The contest is an open invitation to youth, aged 18-29, to share your thinking, insights, and perspectives on how the unacceptable harm caused by cluster munitions impacts lives and specifically:

- how cluster munitions impede progress towards the Sustainable Development Goals;
- how educating youth about cluster munitions saves lives;
- and how the international ban on the weapon contributes to humanitarian disarmament goals.

Contestants are invited to share your multimedia submission on what one or multiple these connections mean to you and to your communities. We want to hear your best thinking on igniting CHANGE, and how this can happen. We encourage deep dives into the connections between cluster munitions and education as a life-saving tool, humanitarian disarmament, and the Sustainable Development Goals. We want to hear how young people are helping to create solutions!

Format: Submissions should be typed and submitted electronically. Visual arts, films, animations, and photographs should be accompanied by a brief description and can be submitted via a shared link using WeTransfer (link here <https://wetransfer.com/>).

Length/Quantity: Essays and Opinion/Editorial entries should be between 800 and 1,000 words. Poetry/Song submissions can be up to two pages. Short film/animation/visual art entries should be no longer than 5 minutes. In the case of photographs and ALL other categories, contestants may submit one product.

Language:

Submissions can be submitted in any UN language. Entrants are encouraged to send their submission in their native language and should provide a courtesy translation in English.

Non-Politicization and Contextualization: All contest entries must adhere to the principle of non-politicization and should not be contextualized to any specific geopolitical conflict. The purpose of this creative contest is to foster understanding, awareness, and dialogue on the broader issues of cluster munitions, risk education, humanitarian disarmament, and development.

Note: Selected winners agree that their contribution will be used by the organizers for web-based communications including web pages and social media, as well as part of an on-site exhibition, while of course duly acknowledging the author. Only entries submitted by the 16 June closing date will be considered.

Participants are kindly requested to:

Avoid Specific Geopolitical References: Entries should refrain from referencing or alluding to specific geopolitical conflicts, regions, or political entities. The focus should remain on the universal themes of humanitarian disarmament, risk education, and sustainable development.

Promote Inclusivity: Entries should aim to be inclusive and encourage a global perspective. Emphasize the shared humanity and collective responsibility in addressing issues related to cluster munitions and their impact. Submissions from, about, and including survivors and communities directly impacted by cluster munitions, are highly encouraged!

Highlight Universal Values: Entries should focus on universal values such as peace, human rights, and cooperation. The intention is to create a space for constructive dialogue and understanding that transcends specific geopolitical contexts.

Respect Diversity: Entries should respect the diversity of perspectives and backgrounds of the participants and potential audience. Divisive or controversial language should be avoided.

By adhering to these guidelines, participants contribute to the creation of an inclusive and constructive dialogue that transcends political boundaries, promoting a shared commitment to addressing the challenges posed by cluster munitions.
